Study programs at the Faculty prepare students to work independently, foster self-esteem, have the ability to show initiative and create new values. We also encourage our students to broaden their knowledge beyond the boundaries of narrow specialization with an emphasis on interdisciplinary studies.

Our graduates will be independent, communicative, creative, team-oriented, critical in their work and able to solve problems. They will care and respect moral values, be well prepared for work in the field of visual arts, literature, political science, cultural studies, sociology and psychology.
